Excerpt from The Usurpations of the Federal Government; The Dangers of Centralization, 1863: Speech of Hon. Robert C. Hutchings, of New York, on the Governor s Annual Message The House being in Committee of the Whole on. the annual Message of the Governor, Mr. Hutchings obtained the floor, and said: Mr. Chairman - I solicit the attention of the members of the Committee to the views which I desire to present, upon the Federal and State relations as treated of in the Message of his Excellency the Governor. I solicit their respectful attention for the reason that I am aware that my views will not be in consonance with those entertained by the Republican members, who constitute an equality of this house, and I am not certain that they will receive the approval of all of my political colleagues. But however you may differ with me, award me the credit of expressing views which are based upon the honest convictions of my judgment and conscience. We have, as it has been expressed, passed the military, and we are now approaching the intellectual epoch of the revolution. The time is near when men will be permitted to investigate its causes and to present their opinions upon the policy of the administration without being charged with treason, and called by the vilest names which party malignity can conceive. I trust that the day is not distant when the standard of patriotism will not be the changing and imbecile policy of the administration, but the ancient standard - obedience to the mandates of the Constitution and laws, based upon the Constitution, by both the North and South. And when that day arrives, men will be permitted to...
