The Irish Line: Farmers, Industrialists, Doctors, Soldiers, Missionaries, Administrators and Family Men. (Paperback)

By Richard G Grimshaw

Createspace, United States, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This is a story about George Grimshaw and his forebears, the latter originating near Blackburn in England s County of Lancashire. George Grimshaw who died in 2008 in his 98th year lived through a time that the world changed completely - this story reflects some of these changes. The original known Grimshaw was Walter de Grimshaw, a farmer and landowner who lived in the 13th Century. He was followed by descendants who eventually became part of Britain s industrial revolution - especially in the spinning of cotton and the manufacture of cloth. In 1770 s Nicholas Grimshaw immigrated to Ireland, where he set up the first modern cotton spinning business near Belfast at the small village of Whitehouse. Nicholas was the progenitor of the IRISH LINE and was a Father of Ulster. His descendants became well know doctors, administrators, and businessmen. George s Grandfather, Thomas Wrigley Grimshaw, was Registrar of Ireland, a well known doctor, with interest in public health, particularly in the control of tuberculosis and typhoid. His large family, most of whom were educated at Trinity College, Dublin, were to become...
