Excerpt from Great American Lawyers, Vol. 3: The Lives and Influence of Judges and Lawyers Who Have Acquired Permanent National Reputation, and Have Developed the Jurisprudence of the United States; A History of the Legal Profession in America The autobiographical sketch, to which reference has been made,² comes down to 1797; no apology is necessary for making considerable quotations from it. The Whole sketch is well worth reading; it gives an interesting account of the state of society and the profession of the law in the country districts of New England during the closing years of the eighteenth century: Till after the age of fourteen, I think, I never attended school but three winters, and not longer than three months each winter.
