Excerpt from The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Vol. 85: August 16, 1923 Norway. One night they were speaking upon a street corner, and she happened to stop and listen. Being a student of the Bible, and having a religiously inclined nature, she thought how easy it would be to place those two young men aright. She belonged to a church in which she had full confidence, and yet there was some thing about the two elders that attracted her, and she wanted to save them. She felt that if she could obtain an interview with them she could convince them beyond a shadow of a doubt that they were wrong. That interview was granted, but instead of her convincing them that they were not preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ, they convinced her that she was wrong. I have heard that mother of mine recite to me time and time again the agonies through which she passed. She knew what it meant to join the Church; so do you. Not only was she ostracized by all her friends, but she had been the pet of the family, and the father and mother who had given her her life thought she was forever ruined. But she had received a testimony, and no power on earth could make her change her mind. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
